Section 1: Breach of Promise to Marry and Return of Engagement Ring and Courtship Gifts

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE:

Bibliographic resources relating to action for breach of promise to marry and the return of engagement ring and courtship presents.

DEFINITIONS:

- “No-fault” approach: “A minority of jurisdictions has adopted a ‘no-fault’ approach, i.e., the modern trend, holding that once an engagement is broken, the engagement ring should be returned to the donor, regardless of fault.” Thorndike v. Demirs, Superior Court, Judicial District of Waterbury at Waterbury, No. CV05-5000243S (July 26, 2007) (44 Conn. L. Rptr. 30, 37) (2007 WL 2363411) (2007 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1944). See Table 1
- “Heart Balm Act”: “Shelton argues that Reid's claims are barred by § 52-572b, known as the ‘Heart Balm Act.’ The relevant language of the statute provides that ‘[n]o action may be brought upon any cause arising from . . . breach of a promise to marry.’ . . . [O]ur Supreme Court has held that ‘[a] proceeding may still be maintained which although occasioned by a breach of contract to marry, and in a sense based upon the breach, is not brought to recover for the breach itself.’ Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 373-74, 429 A.2d 886 (1980). Thus, Reid may maintain a cause of action so long as he ‘is not asking for damages because of a broken heart or a mortified spirit.’ Id., 373.” Reid v. Shelton, Superior Court, Judicial District of New Haven at New Haven, No. CV11-6021534S (June 3, 2013) (2013 WL 3214935) (2013 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1251).
- “Fraudulent Misrepresentation”: “A cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation is an exception to the Heart Balm Act where one cohabitant claims she was fraudulently induced to transfer money or property to the other cohabitant. See Piccininni v. Hajus, supra, 180 Conn. 373; Rabaglino v. King, supra, Superior Court, Docket No. 325871, 3 Conn.L.Rptr. 132.” Weathers v. Maslar, Superior Court, Judicial District of Middlesex, at Middletown, No. CV99-0088674 (Jan. 31, 2000) (26 Conn. L. Rptr. 297, 298) (2000 WL 157543) (2000 Conn. Super. LEXIS 221).
- “Unjust enrichment”: “The Supreme Court decision in Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 429 A.2d 886 (1980), outlines the right of a donor to obtain reimbursement for expenditures occurred in contemplation of marriage. The case holds that the so-called Heart Balm statute, General Statutes § 52-572b, regarding breach of a promise to marry, only bars claims of humiliation, mental anguish and the like, but does not affect ‘rights and duties determinable by common law principles.’ Id., 372. Thus, a donor of money or property that were given ‘conditional upon a subsequent ceremonial marriage’ may recover when the condition is broken by the donee. Id. An action for false and fraudulent representations will also be permitted. Id., 373. The dissent by Chief Justice Peters points out that a donor can regain money or property obtained by the donee as a result of ‘trickery, cunning and duplicitous dealing’ under the doctrine of ‘unjust enrichment;’ Id., 375-76; which is the remedy invoked by the plaintiff in the second count of his complaint. Thus, the plaintiff has pleaded a valid cause of action and the resolution of plaintiff’s application turns to whether he has shown probable cause that he will recover under unjust enrichment.” Greene v. Cox, Superior Court, Judicial District of Stamford-Norwalk at Stamford, No. CV95-0147177 (Dec. 19, 1995) (1995 WL 780893) (1995 Conn. Super. LEXIS 3538).

- Pressman v. Purcell, No. 3:17-CV-1918, (2018 WL 6069099) (2nd Cir. August 19, 2019). “The third-party defendants argue that the claims of fraud in the inducement and fraudulent misrepresentation against Pressman are barred by Connecticut’s heart balm statute. See Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 52-572b. The Supreme Court of Connecticut has explained that the purpose of the heart balm statute was to prevent suits that sought damages for ‘confused feelings, sentimental bruises, blighted affections, wounded pride, mental anguish and social humiliation; for impairment of health, for expenditures made in anticipation of the wedding, for the deprivation of other opportunities to marry and for the loss of the pecuniary and social advantages which the marriage offered.’ Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 373, 429 A.2d 886 (1980). In the same opinion, however, the Court stressed that ‘Heart Balm statutes should be applied no further than to bar actions for damages suffered from loss of marriage, humiliation, and other direct consequences of the breach, and should not affect the rights and duties determinable by common law principles.’”
- MacDermid, Inc. v. Leonetti, Superior Court, Judicial District of Waterbury at Waterbury, No. UWY-CV11-6012559S (April 22, 2016) (2016 WL 2763064) (2016 Conn. Super. LEXIS 884). “[T]he Supreme Court, in Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 429 A.2d 886 (1980) permitted an action for restitution of property or money transferred in reliance on a false and fraudulent representation of intention to marry, even though a statute prohibited an action for alienation of affections or for breach of promise to marry.”

- Reid v. Shelton, Superior Court, Judicial District of New Haven at New Haven, No. CV11-6021534S (Dec. 30, 2013) (57 Conn. L. Rptr. 405, 406) (2013 WL 7084810) (2013 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2987). “So this court is left to decide whether it will follow the single 43-year-old precedent of Finch or join the modern view cases that fault should not be a factor in determining who keeps the engagement ring. The modern view is that the gift of the engagement ring is a conditional gift, the condition being the subsequent marriage of the parties. If the marriage does not take place, the condition has not been met and the ring should be returned to the donor. After a review of numerous cases and A.L.R. treatises, this court is convinced that the modern no-fault rule is clearly the better rule and comports with the modern trends on handling family matters on a no fault basis.’ Thorndike v. Demirs, Superior Court, Judicial District of Waterbury, Docket No. 5000243 (July 26, 2007), p.9. This Court agrees with that approach . . . and orders that the engagement ring be returned to the plaintiff.”

- Cyrankowski v. Desrocher, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford at Hartford, No. HHD-CV10-6015281S (July 7, 2011) (52 Conn. L. Rptr. 298, 299) (2011 WL 3427219) (2011 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1781). “Under the foregoing analysis, the defendant’s retention of the plaintiff’s ring did not become actionable as conversion until April 29, 2009, when the detention became wrongful by reason of the defendant’s refusal to comply with the plaintiff’s demand for its return. Because this case was instituted less than three years after that date, the plaintiff’s challenged conversion claim is not barred by Section 52-577.”

“[T]he three-year limitations period for the plaintiff’s challenged replevin claim did not begin to run until at least April 29, 2009, when he first demanded, through his counsel, the return of his ring. Because this case was instituted less than three years after that date, the plaintiff’s challenged replevin claim is not barred by Section 52-577.” p. 300.

- Govotski v. Morrissey, Superior Court, Judicial District of Litchfield at Litchfield, No. CV10-6003186S (May 20, 2011) (2011 WL 2418522) (2011 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1257). “The plaintiff did not prove that he paid for the ring and gave it to the defendant. The court finds, as a fact, that the ring was purchased with funds from the joint account. Although both parties claim to have provided more than one-half of the funding for that account, these claims are rejected as unproven by a fair preponderance of the evidence. Therefore, anything paid for with funds from the joint account is presumed to be owned jointly. Under these facts, the ring must be sold and the proceeds split equally.”

- Miller v. Chiaia, Superior Court, Judicial District of Fairfield at Bridgeport, No. CV09-5025243 (March 15, 2011) (51 Conn. L. Rptr. 581, 582) (2011 WL 1367050) (2011 Conn. Super. LEXIS 681). “After thoroughly reviewing the law on this subject, the court aligned itself with the more modern view that, regardless of fault, the engagement ring should be returned to the donor. The court noted the likely difficulty in truly determining the basis for fault in many failed engagements. This court finds that the rationale stated by the court in Thorndike is persuasive and it should be followed here. Therefore, the plaintiff is the owner of the ring and he should recover it.”
- Sullivan v. Ross et al., Superior Court, Judicial District of New London at New London, No. CV07-5004195 (May 29, 2009) (2009 WL 1754591) (2009 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1479). “The presumption of a donative intent has been recognized in the case of a parent and child and husband and wife. This presumption has never been recognized between an unmarried couple. Wright v. Mallen, 94 Conn.App. 789, 792, 894 A.2d 1016 (2006), cert. denied 278 Conn. 918, 899 A.2d 623 (2006). In this case, at the time of the conveyance, the parties were not married. Here, then, where plaintiff paid the entire purchase price, defendant received her interest in the real property as a gift in contemplation of marriage. A gift made in contemplation of marriage is not an absolute gift, but is conditioned upon a subsequent ceremonial marriage. Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 372, 429 A.2d 886 (1980). Under such circumstances, a donative intent on the part of the plaintiff here cannot be found. The allegations of the fifth count have been proven. A resulting trust, in favor of the plaintiff, exists on the property as alleged.”
- Benisch v. Benisch, Superior Court, Judicial District of Stamford-Norwalk at Stamford, No. FA01-0186835 (September 16, 2008) (2008 WL 4416033) (2008 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2313). “The defendant filed a motion dated January 5, 2007 (179-00) alleging that the rings delivered to her by the plaintiff were different rings and that the original rings be returned to her. ... Sua sponte the court then ruled that it was obliged to examine if the order as written in the judgment required any further action by the court. The court order is impossible to comply with if the court intended that they be returned in their original condition. If the court accepted the plaintiff's testimony that he had them, in his words, “boiled” i.e., modified for an intended future use and had it said so in its decision then no ambiguity exists.”
- Thorndike v. Demirs, Superior Court, Judicial District of Waterbury at Waterbury, No. CV05-5000243S (July 26, 2007) (44 Conn. L. Rptr. 30, 37) (2007 WL 2363411) (2007 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1944). "A minority of jurisdictions has adopted a 'no-fault' approach, i.e., the modern trend, holding that once an engagement is broken, the engagement ring should be returned to the donor, regardless of fault. . . Pursuant to this approach, fault is irrelevant, if ascertainable at all, because ownership of the engagement ring was conditional and the condition of marriage was never fulfilled. . . We find this latter approach to be more persuasive. Indeed, the "no-fault" approach is consistent with our "no-fault" system of divorce . . . We do not want to require our judiciary to tackle the seemingly insurmountable task of determining which party was at fault for the termination of an engagement for marriage, as such may force trials courts to sort through volumes of self-serving testimony regarding who-did-what during the engagement." (Internal citations omitted). See [Table 1].

- Starbuck v. Starbuck, Superior Court, Judicial District of Danbury at Danbury, No. FA04-0352654S (March 17, 2006) (2006 WL 894440) (2006 Conn. Super. LEXIS 861). "The court finds that the ring became the separate property of the defendant at the time of the marriage under the terms of the prenuptial agreement. Alternatively, the court views the ring as given on an implied condition that the marriage would take place. See Clark v. Pendleton, 20 Conn. 495, 505 (1850). The marriage occurred. The court finds the ring belongs to the defendant."
- Dore v. Devine, Superior Court, Judicial District of Stamford-Norwalk at Stamford, No. CV00-0176933S (Oct. 6, 2000) (2000 WL 1682709) (2000 Conn. Super. LEXIS 2764). "The defendant administrator argues that all four counts are legally insufficient because of the Connecticut Heart Balm Act, General Statutes § 52-572b. Initially, the court notes that this case does not involve, whatsoever, the alienation of affections, and, therefore, any propositions that the defendant uses from such cases as an analogy, are unpersuasive. The narrow issue in this case is whether the plaintiffs claims fall within a 'cause arising from . . . breach of a promise to marry,' as stated and prohibited by § 52-572b. After consulting the cases which have interpreted § 52-572b, this court finds that the plaintiffs claims are not barred by the Heart Balm statute."
- Mancini v. Wyzik, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford-New Britain at Hartford, No. CV93-0520862 (Apr. 8, 1994) (1994 WL 146336) (1994 Conn. Super. LEXIS 944). "Although it would appear that certain portions of the complaint allege a breach of promise to marry, other portions of the complaint appear to allege a breach of contract wherein defendant's promises caused the plaintiff to sell her own home and to expend substantial funds to complete

- Crowell v. Danforth, 222 Conn. 150, 151, 609 A.2d 654 (1992). "This is an action seeking the return of a gift allegedly made in contemplation of marriage and seeking an accounting of jointly owned real property"
- Rabaglino v. King, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford-New Britain at Hartford, No. 0325871 (Jan. 15, 1991) (3 Conn. L. Rptr. 132, 133) (1991 WL 27914) (1991 Conn. Super. LEXIS 85). "Although actions arising from alienation of affection or from breach of promise to marry are barred by Gen.Stat. § 52-572(b), the statute does not preclude an action for return of things given in reliance of false and fraudulent representation nor affect rights and duties determinable by common law principles. Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 372. The purpose of the statute was to prevent the recovery of damages based upon contused feelings, sentimental bruises, blighted affections, wounded pride, mental anguish and social humiliation; for impairment of health, for expenditures made in anticipation of the wedding, for the deprivation of other opportunities to marry and for the loss of the pecuniary and social advantages which the marriage offered. Id. 373."
- Piccininni v. Hajus, 180 Conn. 369, 373, 429 A.2d 886 (1980). "The plaintiff here is not asking for damages because of a broken heart or a mortified spirit. He is asking for the return of things which he bestowed in reliance upon the defendant's fraudulent representations. The Act does not preclude an action for restitution of specific property or money transferred in reliance on various false and fraudulent representation, apart from any promise to marry, as to their intended use."

Table 1: No Fault Approach

No Fault, Modern Approach
No-fault approach	"A minority of jurisdictions has adopted a 'no-fault' approach, i.e., the modern trend, holding that once an engagement is broken, the engagement ring should be returned to the donor, regardless of fault." Thorndike v. Demirs, Superior Court, Judicial District of Waterbury at Waterbury, No. CV05-5000243S (July 26, 2007) (44 Conn. L. Rptr. 30, 37) (2007 WL 2363411) (2007 Conn. Super. LEXIS 1944).
Modern view	"So this court is left to decide whether it will follow the single 43-year-old precedent of Finch or join the modern view cases that fault should not be a factor in determining who keeps an engagement ring. The modern view is that the gift of the engagement ring is a conditional gift, the condition being the subsequent marriage of the parties. Test	"Some of these 'no-fault' jurisdictions, for example, highlight the fact that the primary purpose behind the engagement period is to allow the couple to test the permanency of their feelings for one another, and with that purpose in mind, it would be irrational to penalize the donor for taking steps to prevent a possibly unhappy marriage." p. 37
Insurmountable task	"We do not want to require our judiciary to tackle the seemingly insurmountable task of determining which party was at fault for the termination of an engagement for marriage, as such may force trial courts to sort through volumes of self-serving testimony regarding who-did-what during the engagement." p. 37
Ring as a Conditional Gift	"... it is given in contemplation of the marriage and is a unique type of conditional gift." p. 37
Majority vs. Minority approach	"Having determined an engagement ring is a conditional gift, we must next decide who, in this case, is entitled to the ring. There is a split of authority on this issue. The 'majority' approach

	resolves the issue by determining ownership on the basis of fault. The 'minority' approach applies a no-fault rule such that the ring would be returned to the donor after the engagement is broken, regardless of fault." p. 37
Decision	"Because of the possibility that an Appellate Court may reverse this court's adoption of the modern view of no fault, this court will now entertain the issue of fault which was completely tried before it. That should obviate any requirement of a remand. If the issue of fault for calling off the wedding became significant on a reversal of this court, this court finds that the plaintiff called off the wedding, that he was the cause or fault of the breakup, and therefore under the fault view, judgment would enter for the defendant on all counts and she would be entitled to keep the ring." p. 38
